

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

This chapter deals with the background of the study, statement of the problem, objectives of the study, significance of the study, scope and limitations, and definition of terms.

1.1. Background of the study

Language is purely human and non- instinctive method of language ideas, emotion and desires by means of system of voluntarily produced symbols. These symbols are, in the first sentence, auditory and they are produced by organ of speech(Sapir, 1912 : 8). In this definition, he states that language as bridge in expressing one's feeling, ideas, emotion and desires by using oral and written forms. Language can be said a means of communication and interaction we use in social life.

There are so many languages in the world and one of them is English. English is an international language which is used in various aspect of life such as politics, economy, education, commerce, technology, and so forth. Take for example in education aspects, many books are written in English. Therefore, students are expected to master language main skills such as, listening, speaking, reading, and writing. While, language sub skills are grammar, vocabulary, and pronunciation as supporting materials. Both the skill and sub-skills play an important role in teaching and learning English.

Reading is one of English skills. It is language process requiring the understanding of written language. It constantly involves guessing, predicting, checking and asking oneself question. This should therefore be taken into consideration when devising reading exercise.

Reading is one of the basic skills beside listening, speaking, and writing which must be acquired by a learner of the English language. Reading can be defined as an active attempt on the part of reader to understand a writer's message. Smith(1983: 6) says that in the process of reading the reader interacts with and tries to reconstruct what a writer wishes to communicate.

Reading is become more and more important in the knowledge acquisition and remains the most effective human activity for transforming information. Based on the statement the writer may say that reading is an activity done by a reader to get information in the text and through reading one can know many things happening in the world.

Grabe(2002:29) states that reading comprehension is an extraordinary of balancing and coordinating many abilities in a very complex and rapid set of routines that makes comprehension seemingly effortless and enjoyable.

Reading as one of the English skills taught at all levels of education considered as the core skill if a reader wants to improve his/her speaking, writing, listening, pronunciation skill and grammar mastery. Reading can help the achievement of other language skills.

The essential goal of reading activity is comprehension. Comprehension refers to ability to understand what is read. In real life, there are so many difficulties that the student face. The textbooks used in school contain reading passage and followed by exercise. It is expected and even to learn improve pronunciation. With all these, students can help develop other language skills.

The fact shows that many students are not accustomed to reading habit. Because of this habit, most of the students didn't understand the text they have read. It can be seen from the way they answer the question provided after they read certain text doing the reading and learning process.
