

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTIONS

This chapter presents the conclusion and the suggestion of the study. Conclusion in line with the problem statements and the objectives having been formulated in chapter one, theory in chapter two, methods and techniques of the data analysis applied in chapter three and the result of the data having been found in chapter four.

5.1 Conclusion

Students who can speak more than two languages like students of SMPN Satu Atap Nuapu usually in everyday life, especially in this study (group presentation) they have done code switching. Based on the presentation in the previous chapter, it can be concluded that:

1. According to the grammatical classification, there are three types of code switching appear in group discussion of class 8th in SMPN Satu Atap Nuapu. They are tag switching, inter-sentential code switching, and intra-sentential code switching.
2. In group presentation, there are three functions that are analyzed. Beside it, they also used code switching for certain functions only. They are referential function (explanation. Express an idea), expressive function (express some part of identity), and phatic function (emphasize, translation/repetition). Code switching is a common thing occurs in the bilingual classroom. Children/students often switch freely between English and Indonesian during class and play for communicate with teachers, peers or family. Code switching in bilingual class, can motivate students meaning conveyed accurately and listeners an understand. Students who are able to do code switching free in the classroom faced with fewer language barriers when discuss the subject metter. So they better able to convey information they have learned from the teacher or peers because of the language freedom code switch provides. Conversation from students who are not allowed to code switch or switch code ineffective often choppy and ends before the time. These students are not able to convey knowledge accurately subject metter to teachers or peers because for language barries.

5.2 Limitation of the Study

In this research, the researcher found what types of code switching, the functions of code switching, and functions of code switching performed by VIII students of SMPN Satu Atap Nuapu.

5.3 Suggestion

Code switching is very interesting to be researched. The writer has only researched part of it. The writer suggests that later, other writers will research other aspect of code switching and in another situation, such as the reason for doing code switching in daily life, etc.
