

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

5.1 Conclusion

This study found that students in the English Study Program of Nusa Cendana University used politeness strategy from Brown and Levinson based on the circumstances in their different daily lives and their individual characteristics. The writer found that the students used only 3 strategy in expressing disagreement by Brown and Levinson theory namely Bald On Record, Positive politeness, and Negative politeness, and the most dominant politeness strategy used by the students is a Negative Politeness strategy.

5.2 Suggestion

The suggestions are as follows:

The teachers are suggested to familiarize their students with different kinds of politeness strategy in expressing disagreement and encourage them to use the strategies in their daily communication.

For students should practice themselves to communicate in a polite and correct language.

For the future researchers need to conduct other studies on expressing disagreement with richer and wider range of situations in order to elicit other types of strategies proposed by Brown and Levinson 1987.
